In the area of toxic tort and products liability defense, Ms. Field's experience includes representing clients in high exposure cases involving wrongful death, devastating illnesses, and catastrophic injuries. Clients' alleged liability has been premised upon a diverse array of products, both industrial and retail, and has extended into the realm of premises liability. Ms. Field has represented Fortune 500 companies in environmental/toxic tort cases involving benzene, silica, mold, and asbestos exposure. Products Ms. Field has defended include chemicals, plastics, engines, generators, medical devices, and industrial and residential appliances. These actions were brought by consumers, employees for alleged injuries caused by allegedly malfunctioning/unsafe equipment and exposure to chemicals in connection with their employment, and family members alleging illness from secondary exposure.
